MOTOR VEHICLE LAWS

Of the State of Maine in Effect July 9, 1921

The New Schedule of fees and the for of Application both for Operators and Registration of Vehicles do not become effective until January 1, 1922.

Vehicles—Their Registration And Operation—Licensing Operators

Sec. 25. The state highway commission shall be the chief enforcement department for all statutes, rules and regulations pertaining to vehicles and the law of the road, and to such commission, hereinafter referred to in this act as the commission, is hereby delegated all rights, duties and powers and by it may be performed all official acts authorized by statute respecting the regulation of motor vehicles and the owners or operators thereof.

The commission may employ such inspectors as may be necessary to enforce the provisions of this act. Inspectors may be equipped with motor-cycles and assigned to the patrol of state highways and other important ways outside of settled portions of cities and towns. The commission, with the consent of the governor and council, may also commission inspectors as state highway police, who shall throughout the state enforce the provisions of this act and all laws relating to motor-driven and horse drawn vehicles, and all rules and regulations in relation thereto, arrest all violators thereof and prosecute all offenses against the same. Said state highway police shall have the same power to serve criminal processes against such offenders as sheriffs to require aid in executing the duties of their office; and before being qualified to discharge the duties required by this act, shall give bond to the treasurer of state in the sum of five hundred dollars with surety approved by the commission and conditioned upon the faithful performance of the duties of their office. No inspector or member of the state highway police shall receive any fee for making an arrest or for court attendance; but shall be paid actual costs of arrest and actual expenses of travel.

Sec. 26. The secretary of state, hereinafter called the secretary, shall collect all fees required for licensing and registering all vehicles and operators, and shall forthwith transmit the same to the treasurer of state. He shall from time to time as required by the governor and council, make report of his doings and of the fees received from vehicle registrations, licenses issued, and from other sources, with such recommendations as he may consider appropriate.

Sec. 27. The secretary may appoint deputies or agents stationed at convenient places in the state to receive applications for registration and licenses and to conduct examinations when ordered by the secretary. Inspectors may be delegated to act as such deputies or agents.

Sec. 28. In the administration of the laws relative to motor vehicles and to the operators and the operation thereof, the commission may conduct hearings, subpoena witnesses, administer oaths, take testimony, and order the production of books and papers. Each commissioner for the purposes mentioned in this chapter may administer oaths, issue subpoenas and all processes necessary for the performance of the duties of the commission. The fees for travel and attendance of witnesses shall be the same as for witnesses before the supreme judicial court and shall be paid by the state out of motor vehicle registration fees upon certificates of the commission filed with the auditor. Any justice of the supreme judicial court, on the petition of the commission, may issue summary process to enforce the lawful orders of the commission in any matter.

To facilitate hearings one member of the commission may take testimony, and shall have the same power to conduct hearings as the commission would have, and on his report or findings the commission may act in any matter as fully as if the commission as a board had conducted such hearing.

Sec. 29. All records of the commission and the secretary pertaining to the applications and registration of motor vehicles and to operators' licenses shall be open to public inspection during office hours. Complaints in writing may be regarded as confidential.

Sec. 30. Applications to operate motor vehicles shall be made under oath and may be presented by mail or otherwise to the secretary, upon blanks prepared under his authority, and which shall therein call for specific answers to questions of a character designed to show the experience and competency of

MEETING OF OXFORD CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

The 98th annual meeting of the Oxford Association of Congregational churches and ministers met with the Congregational church in Bethel, June 12 and 15.

The churches were generally well represented by their pastors and delegates as well as by laymen including, of course, the women who in many of the churches are the working force.

After organization and business Miss Florence Ellis gave a most earnest address upon "Church Membership in the Rural Community"; Miss Ellis is pastor of the church in Oxford and has an intimate knowledge of all the rural churches in the County.

After dinner was served and a social hour enjoyed the meeting was continued. Among the many interesting topics brought to us was "How shall we vitally relate our churches to our academies and high schools." Prof. Hertell of Bates College gave a most earnest appeal in behalf of giving our young people that education which will develop the highest type of manhood and womanhood.

The Woman's Hour was among the inspiring addresses. Mrs. Johnson made a strong appeal for the Woman's Home Missionary Union which is doing such a wonderful work in the South to educate not only the colored race to prepare them for a part they should have as citizens of our country but the mountain whites from whom our great Abraham Lincoln descended. Miss Clay brought to us the missionary news from overseas which was very encouraging. The evening address by Mr. Dana K. Mitchell, missionary to Turkey, connected with Antioch College eighteen years, deported during the war and knows the Turkish situation thoroughly, was one that those who failed to hear lost a great privilege. To see and hear a man who has worked for years among these people and is burning with a desire to return to the work he and his wife to which they have consecrated their lives, was an inspiration.

The New Apportionment and The Pilgrim Memorial Fund was presented by Rev. Frank Hodgdon who held the close attention of his audience to the very close.

The afternoon session was carried out according to the program. The communion service closed the meeting which had been helpful and inspiring. The keynote of all the addresses seemed to be a plea for the highest and most helpful education of all races as a means of developing the highest type of citizenship which shall bring this world into a closer brotherhood and peace.

A salute was fired at the grave and taps sounded. Three veterans of the Civil War of Canton were present and members of the Relief Corps, besides the Post.

The casket was draped with the Stars and Stripes and the floral display was beautiful and included wreaths from Earl H. Marston Post, Lincoln Mass. Legion and the Relief Corps.

To Florence
LEST YOU FORGET
By Addie K. Mason

I've not time to tell much of a story,
Nor the voice to sing your song,
But here are some rhymes for your pleasure;
I hope they will not seem too long.
As we glance back to days that have hastened
So swift down life's stream away,
There are many memories pleasant
Of meetings so glad and gay.

And of nights when we worried a trifle
For fear Florence might be sick,
When in spite of our utmost endeavors
She would eat Ida's cake much too quick.

Then we'd look with hurried glances
Up and down and across the hall
To see if the Doctor was present,
And pray that he'd not have a "call."

While you kept on smiling serenely—
Also kept on eating the cake,
Until we are firmly convinced, dear,
That your stomach never will ache.
Yes! we know your love for the auto,
No "mere man" can give you a place,
You steer clear of all their pitfalls
And drive on with a smiling face.

Yet some day in the gladsome future
When of leisure you've had your fill,
You will long for a pen and an apron
And the work at Springer's red mill.
While faces of friends who have loved you
Will appear in the gleaming gray;
As they hover closely around you
At the twilight of many a day.

Then in thought you will hasten swiftly
Back over the long winding trail
To Bethel our town of beauty,
Fair village within the vale
Near the shore of our own loved river
Where the mountains are mirrored so plain
That the purple haze on their rugged slopes
Show pictures found only in Maine.

For oft times a New England tourist
Dreams he sees (I) the same purple light
On the famed Italian hilltops,
'Neath those skies with the sunshine bright.

And his heart knows a passionate longing
To return to that village again,
Where the sunsets are glimpses of Heaven—
In Bethel, away in Maine.

Now when Autumn shall paint our forests
With colors so rich and gay,
You'll be speeding along in your auto
To that new home so far away.

In that land where "Jack Frost's" fingers
Mar not the flowers so fair—
But methinks you will miss his magic
That makes our foliage so rare.

We want you to be very happy
In your home in a distant clime,
But keep love and faith forever
For friends of the olden times.

So this tiny token we bring, dear,
And gladly give it to you—
Please wear it with loving memories
Of the friends and the hearts so true.

Now if ever your heart feels heavy
And you think that life is vain,
Cheer up for there's always a welcome
And some cake, away in Maine.

Bethel, Maine,
June 20th, 1921.

The Ideal Ointment

Petro-Tan

SCRATCHES: An inflammatory condition of horses, extending in under the fetlock to the hock or knee. Caused by dry, dusty roads, over feed, exposure to wet and mud, poor circulation, or weak kidneys, or from other causes. Varies from a slight swelling and soreness to a raw, open sore with intense pain and lameness. Treatment is external to the affected part.

To those who have horses affected with scratches, we recommend that they try Petro-Tan. In severe cases, it is well to smear Petro-Tan on cloth or gauze, then bandage it over the part for a few applications. Reports which are received right along testify that Petro-Tan removes the soreness, heals quickly, and is economical to use. Also for boils, chafes, cuts and other wounds.

Sold by druggists, 25c, 50c and $1.00

How Markham Lost His Cook

By DOROTHY WHITCOMB.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lindsay's mentality was not devoid of an element of humor in its composition, and the incongruity of his mission appealed to this latent sense as he stepped quietly out of his house at night and looked back into the well-lit parlor. He saw his wife seated in her chair, reading as calmly as though he had gone out upon the most ordinary visit to some friend. She hardly raised her eyes when he said good-by to her, yet there had been an emotional scene only that morning, and it was this that had nerved Lindsay to his resolution.

He could endure his wife's complaints no longer. He was resolved to put an end to them for ever. And he was going like a thief by night to steal the most precious jewel of Markham's household.

He had fought down the impulse toward dishonor for many weeks. But now the time had come when he could resist no longer. Life without Lucille would have no zest. His home had grown to be no home to him. His very food had lost its savor.

Markham had brought her back to America after his last visit to France. When she arrived she was a simple country girl, innocent, ignorant of the language of her adopted country. She had met few men; she had never even been engaged before. And once in Markham's power he watched her jealously. He would hardly permit her to leave home.

Strangely enough, it was Mrs. Lindsay who had first met her, and it was she who had introduced Lindsay to one of the rare occasions when Lucille had snatched a short respite from Markham's tyranny. It was at a friend's house. Mrs. Lindsay was taken at once with the pale, beautiful French girl. But it was Lindsay who had pursued the acquaintance.

Markham and he were not on friendly terms. He knew enough of the man's cowardly nature to be aware that, once Lucille and he were together, there would be no pursuit. At last the time had arrived when he was able to propose his plan.

She looked at him with veiled terror, and yet with a joy that she could hardly conceal.

"I will give you more than Markham can ever give you," he said gaily and then outlined his plan. Markham was not always home before nightfall. Let her appoint some day when he would be detained at his office. It would then be the simplest thing for him to cover the two miles between their houses and meet her after dark when there were no prying eyes to see. She must have her possessions—what she could pack into a suitcase—ready, and he would take her away, never to see Markham again.

"But if he comes after me?" she asked, still half afraid.

Lindsay had laughed at that, and his contempt for Markham seemed to find an answer in the girl's soul. She told him many little details of the man; his tyranny, his greed. Once, when she had not prepared a dish exactly to his liking he had sworn at her. She had never forgotten that. Yes, she would go.

And Lindsay, looking back at his wife in her chair, felt not the least compunction. For he was going to end her complaints effectively and forever.

Markham was not to be home that night. So much he had discovered, and he had sent Lucille a message by a trusted confidant. Now he strode out into the dark eagerly, his mind tense upon his mission, every nerve tingling with the thought of the ecstatic happiness that lay in store for him.

And she was waiting for him. As he approached the unit house where the man he hated lived he saw her, a sinuous shadow in the doorway.

"Lucille!" he whispered.

And so he led her way.

The suitcase was weighty, but he walked as though he trod on air, and Lucille strode at his side. At last they stood outside his house again, and, looking through the window, Lindsay perceived that his wife still occupied the same chair and held the same book. All the emotions that had possessed him had been entirely unknown to her; she read as tranquilly as though nothing were at stake.

Then a sense of unutterable love for this quiet woman in the chair welled up in Lindsay's heart. He turned to the girl and spoke almost curiously.

"I am going in to tell her," he said.

"To tell your wife?"

"Yes—everything. But wait for me. I shall not abandon you. Have no fear. It will be but a moment."

The waiting girl saw Lindsay disappear within the house; she saw him bend over his wife, saw her start up incredulously and look at him with eyes that seared his soul. Then she was running out of the house with Lindsay at her side.

"You! Lucille!" she cried.

"Yes, madame."

"And you have come to stay? You will not leave us?" She turned to her husband. "O, my dear," she cried, "to think that we should own the only French cook in Bethel! And it's true!" She seized the girl's hands and almost pulled her through the door.

One or two scourings might do for an ordinary flour, but William Tell is not an ordinary flour. So we scour our wheat six times, one after another, until we know that it is perfectly clean. We then take off the outside hull, and use only the fine rich inside portion of the grain.

Considering the way it's made, it's not surprising that William Tell is so clean and pure and fine.

WHAT FRANKLIN K. LANE THOUGHT OF MAINE

The following is taken from the Kennebec Journal of Saturday, June 4. Mr. Lane spent several weeks in Bethel last fall.

Wholehearted Endorsement He Loved Maine Department of the Interior, United States Geological Survey, Washington, June 2, 1921.

Office of the Director Editor, Kennebec Journal, Augusta, Maine.

Dear Sir: Last year I received a note from Secretary Lane while he was staying at Bethel. His letter carried such a wholehearted endorsement of our State that I intended then to send a copy of the letter to some Oxford County paper, and received his permission to give this publicity to his statement. However, I neglected to send it at that time but now this good leader of American thought has left us, I feel his words of appreciation carry even more weight.

I trust you can pass these words on to other of our Maine citizens. Yours very truly, GEO. OTIS SMITH.

Dear Geo. Otis: I love this Maine of yours. It is beautiful—and its people are good stuff—strong, wholesome, intelligent young men—I like them greatly. I'd be content to sit right down here and wait for whatever is to come. It is a place of serenity. There is no rush, yet people live, and the necessary things get done. It doesn't have any Ford factories but I rather fancy it makes the men who go West and make the factories.

The autumn has been one long procession of gay banners on the hillsides, and now that the snow has come the pines are blue and the mountains purple; and mountains 5,000 feet high are just as good, more comprehensible, than mountains 15,000 feet high. What is more lovely, stately and of fine color than a line of these receding hills which walk away from you as if they continued clear across the continent.

I hope to get back here and enjoy this air. No wonder this State is for prohibition—the air itself is an intoxicant, especially when the snow is on the ground and it comes to you gently; it is as bracing as a cocktail, not a senous wine like the Santa Barbara air, but I presume more like the high Sierras where the fishing is good.

Cordially, F. K. LANE.

OBITUARY

Just as the Sabbath was ushered in by the rising of the sun May 30th, Mrs. Elizabeth Harding West, wife of Mr. Abner W. West, passed away at her home in Elizabethtown, No. Carolina. About ten days previous Mrs. West was stricken with paralysis and though far from kith and kin those who had come to love her in her adopted home, because of her noble character, refinement and culture, gently and lovingly ministered to her until she gently passed into that land beyond the sunset's evening glow.

Mrs. West before her marriage was Miss Elizabeth Harding, born in Bethel, Maine, in 1852. Gifted with a pleasing personality, a culture and refinement so peculiar to that of the old South, she was dearly loved and taken into the hearts and homes of the people of Elizabethtown from the time she and her husband came here from Norfolk, Virginia, about four years ago.

She was a devoted member of the Episcopal Church, holding her membership at Williamsburg, Virginia. The funeral services were held Monday afternoon, Rev. James Lapeley officiating, assisted by Rev. S. W. Phillips.

Surviving beside her devoted husband are two sisters and a brother, Mrs. A. F. Copeland, Miss Mabel Harding and Mr. George Harding in Bethel, Maine.

Truly it can be said—
Thy day has come not gone;
Thy sun has risen, not set,
Thy life is now beyond the reach of death or change,
Not ended but begun.

Mrs. E. F. McCulloch.
The above was copied from the Blade Journal, No. Carolina.

Note—Mrs. West has left many friends in Bethel, her girlhood home, who will join in the above tribute from friends in her adopted home, and deep sympathy will be extended to Mr. West who is now left alone. His sister, Mrs. Wm. Godwin, who lived in their home and was tenderly cared for several years, passed away two years ago.

There were appropriate exercises by all the children.

On Sunday evening quite a number of members of the Y. P. C. U. of the Universalist church visited the Norway, Y. P. C. U. The state president, Rev. Milo Folsom, was present and gave a very able address.

HOW

FOOTPRINTS OF SOLDIERS HAVE BEEN PRESERVED.—Footprints, 180 years old, of a Hawaiian army that fled from the wrath of Pele, goddess of the active volcano of Kilauea, near Hilo, are believed to have been discovered in the Kau desert, south of the greater crater, by Prof. T. A. Jagger, Jr., in charge of the volcano observatory.

Dr. Jagger and his party were exploring a region far removed from any of the known modern trails when they came upon an area thickly covered with the imprint of naked feet, all pointing in one direction, all deep at the toes and light at the heels, indicating that the makers of the tracks had been running at top speed.

The tracks had been made in volcanic ash, which is strongly impregnated with sulphuric acid and gypsum, and which, when wet by rain, settles into a hard concrete. This explains the preservation of the imprints for a period believed to have stretched over more than a century and a quarter.

Hawaiian legend and history provide the other side of the story, the connection between the Kau desert tracks and the flight of the army of Keoua, king of Kau, from Pele's wrath.

Keoua led an army of three divisions against King Kamehameha, who later united all the "Hawaiian Islands" under his sway, in the year 1700. This year also recorded the last explosive eruption of Kilauea. Hawaiian legend records that Pele rolled stones into Kilauea crater to mark their desertion for the goddess of the molten lake. Whatever the reason for the outbreak, Pele rose in her wrath and, with a terrific explosive eruption, totally wiped out the second division of Keoua's army.

The footprints found in the Kau desert are believed to be those of men of the first division, who, seeing the destruction of their comrades in the rear, fled from the locality. The third division, coming up, saw the bodies of the annihilated second and halted.

The area in which the footprints were discovered is part of the new Kilauea national park, which will be dedicated this year, and steps have already been taken to inclose the tracks and preserve them.

UNREST AMONG JAP WOMEN

How the Feminist Movement is Making Headway in the Land of the Mikado.

"It does not please my honorable mother," is no longer the supreme criterion in Japanese homes. At a feminist Japanese forum in which 5,000 women participated recently in Tokyo, the question of mother-in-law authority was one of the questions uppermost in the minds of the audience. Other subjects discussed were dress and divorce laws. So great was the interest that nearly 2,000 women had to be turned away.

"Long-sleeved kimono and got in the way of the typewriter and other work which Japanese girls are taking up," commented Miss Florence Wells of the Japanese section, national board, Y. W. C. A. "Dress reform in Tokyo now calls for more practical adaptation of styles. A man is one of the leaders who say it is only the vanity of mothers who start their children in long-sleeved kimono and heavy wooden clogs. When the Japanese stenographer is late, she can't cover ground very fast in the latter."

Among the audience at the feminist meeting were many native members of the Y. W. C. A. association in Tokyo.

How Solid Bank Robbers.

Shutters of fold bullet-proof steel that drop instantly to cover the openings of a cashier's booth on the pressure of a button constitute a new solution of at least one phase of the hold-up problem. The metal sheets are hung in a concealed position above the booth windows and may be released by a button at the cashier's hand or by other buttons outside, so that even an unoccupied booth is protected. Small portholes permit the cashier to see the intruder. If opportunity offers, and the electrical connection of the drop also sets an alarm bell going to ringing with noisy vigor—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

How Grand Army Was Formed.

The first post of the Grand Army of the Republic was organized in Decatur, Ill., in 1865. The object of the society are the preservation of fraternal feeling, strengthening of loyal sentiment and aid to needy families of veterans. It admits to membership any soldier, sailor or marine of the United States who served between April 12, 1861, and April 9, 1865, and who was honorably discharged. Members of state regiments who were called into actual service and were subject to the orders of the United States and general officers also are eligible for membership.

AN AMERICAN GIBRALTAR

Town and Harbor of Charlotte Amalie.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.) The Virgin Islands, bought by the United States from Denmark in 1917, to which American marines recently started to fly from Washington are interesting and worthy of consideration not only because of their eventful history but also because they have figured in many diplomatic negotiations and because of their strategic importance to the United States in relation to the Panama canal.

That this group of about fifty islands, only three of which are big enough to have a name on any but hydrographic charts and local maps, and the biggest of which one could walk around in nine hours seems important to our government may be judged by the price it paid for them. We gave less than two cents an acre for Alaska, less than three cents an acre for California, Nevada, Colorado and Utah, less than 14 cents an acre for Florida, and under 27 cents an acre for the Philippines. Even for the Canal Zone we paid but $35.83 per acre. Yet the $25,000,000 for the group we paid Denmark figures out more than $205 per acre for her holdings.

Authorities have disagreed as to the area of the islands. Even as to the three main islands—St. Thomas, St. John and St. Croix—there is no agreement upon the question of area. In order to get a definite statement as to their size, planimeter measurements of their maps were made on hydrographic charts in the offices of the National Geographic society, and they show that St. Thomas is 22.25 square miles in area, St. Croix 84.25 square miles, and St. John 19.97 square miles, making a total of 126.47 square miles for the three islands. Some authorities give the area as 138 square miles and others as 142 square miles.

Finest of Harbors. From the standpoint of the United States, St. Thomas is the most important of the group of islands. This importance arises from the fact that the harbor on the south side of the island, on whose borders the town of Charlotte Amalie is located, is one of the finest in all tropical America. From the days of the buccannons its strategic advantage has been realized, for when the Spanish Main was the happy hunting ground of the gentlemen of the Black Flag this harbor was their headquarters.

The harbor is completely sheltered. Outside is a roadstead partly protected by an outlying island, which provides anchorage for a great number of ships. At its mouth the harbor is 600 feet wide, and one passes through this narrow neck into a beautiful basin, three-quarters of a mile in diameter, whose waters are seldom disturbed however much the sea beyond may rage. A trade wind blows during the whole year, with the exception of the hurricane months—August, September and October—when it becomes irregular and sometimes ceases to blow altogether. The greatest heat is experienced in August, September and October; but even then it rarely rises above 91 degrees Fahrenheit, while at times it falls as low as 64 degrees.

On three sides of the harbor the mountains and their outlying foothills rise sharply from the water, leaving but a very narrow beach; so that the major portion of the town had to find room for expansion by climbing up the side of the mountain. Just outside of and above the town are the two old towers, commonly known as Bluebeard's Castle and Blackbeard's Castle. Legend has it that here these daring old buccanniers had their headquarters and played their romantic roles as "the hornets of the Spanish Main," but history disputes legend, for it says that they were built by the Danish government as a measure of defense in 1650.

Views From the Heights. By climbing the mountain to Amalie, within easy walking distance of Charlotte Amalie, one can, on a clear day, get a view of Porto Rico, St. Croix, and Bequia. A little farther on one reaches heights where views, unsurpassed in all the Caribbean region, may be had of Porto Rico to the west and the Lesser Antilles to the south. The West Indian-Panama Telegraph company has a cable office at Charlotte Amalie, and it was from this place that the world got so much of its news during the Spanish-American war, as well as during the Maritimes disaster.

Under the Danish regime the governor of the colonies lived in Charlotte Amalie from October 1 to April 1, and in Christiansted, on the island of St. Croix, from April 1 to October 1. He was assisted by a colonial council, consisting of four members nominated by the crown and eleven elected by the people. How well the population was represented may be judged by the statement that out of nearly 11,000 inhabitants, in 1891, only 200 were voters. There was no color line in St. Thomas, or in either of the other islands for that matter, and the larger part of the population is of mixed blood. The state church was Lutheran, although all others were tolerated. The Catholic and Episcopal congregations are the largest. The former has established a fine school for girls. The Jews have a well-built synagogue, while the Moravians have long been doing an important work among the negroes of the island. The Dutch Reformed and Wesleyan churches have also been engaged in like work.

May Be a Second Gibraltar.

Naval officers declare that St. Thomas possesses advantages enabling it to be converted into a second Gibraltar. The structure of the island, with its long central ridge, having a general elevation of about 1,000 feet, with some points 1,500 feet, is especially fitted for the emplacement of fortifications commanding both shores at the same time, making it extremely difficult for an enemy to approach or obtain a foothold on the island. The elevated ground in the immediate neighborhood of the excellent roadstead makes the question of harbor defense a comparatively easy one. While being near other islands, St. Thomas is practically in the open ocean, and permits entrance and egress of a fleet without being observed.

St. John, the smallest of the three islands, with a good harbor in Coral Bay, is only 8 miles long and 1 miles wide in its broadest part. It has a population of less than 1,000; but it is an island that has done great service to America, for it is from here that come the leaves of the bay tree (Pimenta acris), from which that well-nigh indispensable toilet article, for men, bay rum, is prepared. While most of the bay rum is made in St. Thomas, St. John produces most of the raw materials from which it is distilled.

This island once had many logwood trees on it, but they have almost entirely disappeared. Charcoal has long been in demand and the natives use logwood in its manufacture. All of the islands have a striking variety of vegetation, 1,200 species having been counted on St. Thomas, and a proportionate number on St. John and St. Croix. The plantain, banana, aspidistra, bell apple, orange, mango and lemon thrive. Sugar-cane flourishes when cultivated according to modern standards.

Communication between St. Thomas and St. John is maintained by several aloops. One of these has a history of more than a century in active service. It is the Vigilant, which has been, in turn, pirate, slave trader and man-of-war. Then she became a prosaic dispatch boat, carrying mail and cargo between the several islands.

St. Croix the Largest.

St. Croix is the largest, richest, and most populous of the three islands. It lies 40 miles south-southeast of St. Thomas, has an area of 84.25 square miles, and a population of approximately 20,000. It has much rich sugar land, more than 10,000 acres being devoted to the crop. It is purely agricultural, with a fine tropical climate, excellent scenery, good roads, and hospitable people. Here, as in the other islands, one hears perhaps more English spoken than any other tongue. The Danes never attempted to interfere with the native preference for English and never made Danish compulsory in the schools.

The island is perhaps more like "United States" than any other territory in the West Indian group. Here, for the days of Bermuda's ascendancy as a winter resort, and of Palm Beach, the Riviera and other places, many fashionable Americans journeyed to St. Croix to escape the cold. Also the children of the prominent families of St. Croix came to the United States to study, for the St. Croix planter admired American and her straight-from-the-shoulder way of doing things.

RUMFORD

Some talk is being made in regard to the matter of having a public market for Rumford. As yet no definite plans have been made, but the idea has been advanced that such a thing would take well in Rumford, if such a plan could be brought out. It is the idea to have the market located on River street, providing the necessary space and arrangement could be made. The farmers would be asked to bring their products into the town, and spaces would be arranged for the sale of the goods on Saturday of each week. It is understood that the market idea has been taken up with several of the leading business men, and the town officials, and that they approve of it.

MOTOR VEHICLE LAWS

The applicant to operate a motor vehicle, a fee of two dollars shall accompany the application. Before the license is granted an applicant may be required to pass such examination by actual demonstration or otherwise as to his qualifications to operate a motor vehicle as the secretary shall require; and no license shall be issued until the secretary is satisfied that the applicant is a proper person to receive it; no license shall be issued to any person under fifteen years of age. A record of all applications for license and of all licenses issued shall be kept by the secretary. Each license shall state the name, age, place of residence of the licensee and the distinguishing numbers or marks assigned to him and may contain a brief description of the license for the purpose of identification and such other information as the secretary shall deem necessary. A person to whom a license to operate a motor vehicle has been issued, unless such license contains a special limitation or restriction, may operate any registered motor vehicle. Every licensee shall endorse his usual signature upon the margin of the license before using it, and no license shall be valid until so endorsed.

Sec. 31. Special licenses to operate motor vehicles shall be issued to chauffeurs subject to the same general requirements governing the issuance of an operator's license as is provided in the preceding sections; but no such license shall be issued to any person less than eighteen years of age. An operator's license shall not entitle a person to drive a motor vehicle as a chauffeur as defined in this section.

The secretary shall furnish every licensed chauffeur with a suitable metal badge with distinguishing number or mark assigned to him thereon without extra charge therefor. Said badge shall be worn by such chauffeur while he is operating or driving a motor vehicle, and shall be valid only during the term of the license of the chauffeur to whom it is issued.

Every application for a chauffeur's license shall be accompanied by a fee of two dollars; provided, however, that if such applicant already holds an operator's license the accompanying fee shall be three dollars.

Failure of an operator or chauffeur to exhibit his license to any magistrate, motor vehicle inspector, police officer, sheriff or other authorized official, on demand, shall be prima facie evidence that such person is not duly licensed.

A chauffeur who is registered under the provisions of law of the state or county of his residence, shall be exempt from license under this section, provided he shall wear a badge or carry a license certificate assigned to him by the jurisdiction of his residence.

The word "chauffeur" as herein used shall mean any person employed for the purpose of operating a motor vehicle, and whose principal duty is to operate such vehicle, but as used elsewhere generally in this act with respect to the use and operation of motor vehicles the word "operator" and "driver" shall include the word "chauffeur."

Temporary licenses without fee may be issued to chauffeurs in the employ of the state or any municipal corporation, to terminate when their employment ends.

Sec. 32. The secretary shall also prepare suitable blanks for applicants for a license to operate motor cycles and he shall issue licenses to competent persons to operate motor cycles, subject to the same general requirements obtaining with respect to a license to operate a motor vehicle.

A license to operate a motor vehicle shall not authorize the licensee to operate a motor cycle unless the license shall so specify, but licensee to operate a motor cycle may on application be granted a license to operate a motor vehicle without paying an additional fee.

Sec. 33. No person shall operate a motor vehicle upon any way in this state unless licensed according to the provisions of this act; but the provisions of this act shall not prevent the operation of a motor vehicle by an unlicensed person, not less than fifteen years of age, if such person is licensed to operate a motor vehicle for the purpose of driving a motor vehicle preparatory to taking out a license for driving, and provided, further, that such person shall be licensed to drive a motor vehicle in the state of his residence.

Sec. 34. Non-residents may operate motor vehicles in this state, except those that are operated in this section, without moving to this state for not exceeding thirty days in any one year without registration, provided such vehicles are registered in a non-adjacent state or country and have attached thereto registration plates, and are driven by persons licensed to operate in this or some other state or country. Provided to the effect, that if such thirty days, if the owner of any such vehicle is to continue its operation within this state, he shall make application to the secretary for registration thereof in accordance with section forty-three and pay the fee required of resident owners.

On receipt of the fee, the secretary shall furnish said non-resident applicant a certificate of registration and appropriate number plates, free of expense, which plates shall be attached to the vehicle as required by section forty-eight, and remain there as long as such vehicle is operated in this state in the year during which said certificate is issued; provided, however, that on applications for registration by such non-residents during the period between the first day of October and the thirty-first day of December in any year, one-half of said registration fee shall be charged. Any motor cycle or side-car owned by a non-resident, operated by a person registered and authorized to operate it in this or some other state or country, having a registration plate or other distinguishing mark attached to the motor cycle, may be operated on the ways of this state for not more than thirty days in the aggregate before registration. Provided, however, that no motor truck, tractor or trailer used for commercial purposes and owned either by a resident of this state or a non-resident thereof, shall be operated over any ways or bridges except and until such vehicle is registered and the registration fee paid as provided by statute for the registration of vehicles with like capacity and character owned in this state; but registration and license evidenced by an appropriate plate or tag attached to the vehicle may be issued to operate it for not exceeding five days in any one year upon payment of one-fourth of the fee required for annual registration of such vehicle; or, for not exceeding ten days, upon payment of one-third of such annual registration. A non-resident may at any time apply for and obtain annual registration of such vehicle by paying the difference between the fee for such short term registration and the fee required for its annual registration. Such vehicle when registered as required by this section may be operated by persons licensed to operate it according to the laws of this or some other state or country, and may display their registered plates in addition to the plates of this state as required by this act.

Sec. 35. The commission may suspend or revoke any certificate of registration or any license issued to any person to operate a motor vehicle after hearing for any cause which it deems sufficient. Pending a speedy hearing it may also summarily suspend a license of any motor vehicle operator in its discretion and may order the license or registration certificate to be surrendered to it whenever it has reason to believe that the holder thereof is an incompetent or incompetent to operate a motor vehicle, or is operating as so to endanger the public; and neither the certificate nor the license shall be resumed unless upon examination or investigation the commission or the appellate court determines that the operator shall again be permitted to operate.

Sec. 36. Notice of the revocation or suspension of the right of a non-resident owner or operator of a vehicle to operate or to have operated said vehicle in this state, shall forthwith be sent by the commission to the motor vehicle department of the state or country which issued his license or registration.

Sec. 37. Notice of any hearing held by the commission, or by its authority, under this act, shall state the place, day and hour thereof, and warn the licensee or registrant that he may then and there appear in person or through counsel, to show cause why his license should not be annulled; and service of such notice shall be sufficient if sent by registered mail to the address given by the licensee or registrant, five days at least before the day set for the hearing.

Sec. 38. The commission may suspend or revoke the right of any non-resident operator to operate in this state and may suspend or revoke the license or right of any non-resident owner to operate or have operated in this state any vehicle for the same causes and under the same conditions and in the same manner that it could take such action regarding any resident owner or operator, or vehicle owned in this state; and thereupon the right of such non-resident owner or operator to operate or have operated any such vehicle in this state shall terminate and he shall be subject to the same penalties as any resident owner or operator who operates without license or registration.

Whoever the commission or secretary is not held by the licensing or registration department or another state or country that any licensee or registrant therein has had his license or registration suspended, revoked or annulled, the commission may forthwith suspend, revoke or terminate any right, license or registration granted to such person in this state.

Sec. 39. If any person is aggrieved by the decision of the commission in revoking or suspending a license or certificate of registration or by the refusal of the secretary to issue a license or certificate of registration he may within ten days thereafter appeal to any justice of the supreme judicial or a superior court, by presenting to him a petition therefor, in term time or vacation. Such justice shall fix a time and place for hearing, which may be in vacation, and cause notice thereof to be given to the commission or secretary; and after hearing it may affirm or reserve their decision, and the decision of such justice shall be final. Pending judgment of the court, the decision of the commission in revoking or suspending any license or certificate of registration shall remain in full force and effect.

Sec. 40. Subject to the same conditions as to appeal, the commission may revoke or suspend the certificate of registration of any vehicle which is so constructed as to be, when in operation, a menace to the safety of its occupants or to the public, or is so constructed or operated as to cause unreasonable damage to ways or bridges.

Sec. 41. Every court and trial justice in every case wherein a person is convicted of the violation of any statute relative to motor vehicles or to the operation of any vehicle shall forthwith transmit to the commission an abstract, duly certified, setting forth therein the names of the parties, the nature of the offense, the date of hearing, the plea, the judgment and the result; and they shall be open to public inspection during reasonable hours. Said magistrates may make such recommendations to the commission as to suspension or revocation of licenses and certificates of registration of respondents as they deem to be in furtherance of justice.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Graham Norcross, railroad manager, and his secretary, Jimmie Dodds, are married at Sand Creek siding with a young lady, Sheila Macrae, and her smaller cousin, Unseen, they witness a peculiar train holdup in which a special car is carried off.

CHAPTER II.—Norcross recognizes the car stolen as John Chadwick's financial machine, whom he was to meet at Portland City. He and Dodds rescue Chadwick, the latter offers Norcross the managership of the Pioneer Short Line, which is in the hands of eastern speculators, headed by Brockbridge Duntun, president of the line. Norcross, learning that Sheila Macrae is stopping at Portland City, accepts.

CHAPTER III.—Dodds overhears conversation between Hatch and Henkel, Gustave Henkel, Portland City financier, in which they admit complicity in Chadwick's kidnapping. Their object being to keep Chadwick from attending a meeting of directors to reorganize the Pioneer Short Line, which would jeopardize their interests.

CHAPTER IV.—To curb the monopoly controlled by Hatch and Henkel, the Red Tower corporation, Norcross forms the Citizens Storage and Warehouse company. He begins to manifest a deep interest in Sheila Macrae. Dodds learns that Sheila is married, but living apart from her husband. Norcross does not know this.

CHAPTER V.—Hatch, aware that Dodds has knowledge of his and Henkel's participation in the Chadwick kidnapping, offers him inducements to leave Norcross. Dodds refuses. Leaving the office, he is knocked senseless, recovering consciousness, he learns that Norcross has disappeared and is believed to have resigned and gone east.

CHAPTER VI.—Dodds connects Norcross' disappearance with machinations of Hatch and Henkel, and on recovering strength sets out to solve the mystery.

"Did Norcross say anything to make you think there had been a fight?" "He told me that Hatch was abusive and had made threats—in a business way."

"In a business way? What do you mean by that?" "I quoted the boss' own words, as nearly as I could recall them."

"So Hatch did make a threat, then? Can you add anything more?"

"I could, but I didn't want to. Mr. Van Britt didn't know anything about the Sand Creek siding hold-up, or I supposed he didn't, and I didn't want to be the first one to tell him. Besides, the whole business was beside the mark. Makle Ann knew, and I knew, that the boss, strong and unbreakable as he was in other ways, had simply thrown up his hands and quit because somebody had told him that Mrs. Sheila had a husband living. So I just said:

"Nothing that would help out," and after he had talked a little while longer our only millionaire went downstairs again.

"It's so funny how things change around for a person just by giving them time to sort of shake down into place and fit themselves together. After a while the chin edge of the wedge that Mrs. Sheila had been trying to drive into me began to take hold, just a little, in spite of what I knew—or thought I knew. What I barely possible, after all, that there had been foul play of some sort!"

In the first place, something had been done to me by somebody: it was a sure thing that I hadn't crippled and half-killed myself all by my lonesome. Then they had said that the boss stayed up with Mr. Ripley that night until after ten o'clock, and had then gone up to go to bed. That being the case, how could anybody have got to him between that time and the leaving time of the midnight Fast Mail to tell him about Mrs. Sheila?

Anyway it was stacked up, it made a three-cornered puzzle, needing somebody to tackle it right away; and when I finally went to sleep it was with the notion that, sick or no sick, I was going to turn out early in the morning and get busy.

I was well enough to get up the next morning, and when I phoned to Mr. Van Britt he sent his car out to the major's to take me down to the office. Just before I left the house, Mrs. Sheila vined me, and after telling me that I must be careful and not take cold in the burnt hand, she put in another word about the boss' disappearance.

"I want you to remember what I said last night, Jimmie, and not let the others talk you over into the belief that Mr. Norcross has gone away because he was either discouraged or afraid. He wouldn't do that: you know it, and I know it. We are his friends, you and I, and we must stand by him and defend him when he isn't here to defend himself."

It did me good to hear her talk that way. I had been sort of getting ready to dislike her for letting the boss get in so deep and not telling him straight out that she was a married woman. And he mustn't; but when I saw that she was trying to be just as loyal to him as I was, it pulled me over to her side again.

Though the boss' disappearance was now four days old, things were still in a sort of slush down at the railroad offices. Mr. Van Britt, being the general superintendent and next in command, had moved over into the boss' office, and Fred May was doing his shorthand work. They wouldn't let me do anything much—I couldn't do much with my right arm in a sling—so I had a chance to hang around and size up the situation. If you want to know how it sized up, you can take it from me that it was pretty bad. People all along the line were bombarding Mr. Van Britt with letters and telegrams wanting to know what was going to be done, and what the change in management was going to mean for the public, and all that. You see, Mr. Norcross had laid out a mighty attractive program in the little time he had been at the wheel, and now it looked as if it was all going to be dumped into the ditch.

Mr. Van Britt saw and talked with everybody, and when he could wedge off a minute or two of privacy, he'd go into the third room of the suite and thrash it out with Juneman, or Billoughby, or Mr. Ripley. From these private talks I found out that there was still some doubt in the minds of all four of them about the boss' drop-out—as to whether it was voluntary or not.

Also, I found out what had been done during the four days. We had no "company detective" at that time, and Mr. Hornack had borrowed a man named Grimmer from his old company, the Overland Central, wiring for him and getting him on the ground within twenty-four hours of the time of Mr. Norcross' disappearance.

Grimmer had gone to work at once, but everything he had turned up, so far, favored the voluntary runaway theory. Mr. Norcross' trunks were still in his rooms at the Bullard; but his two grips were gone. And the night clerk at the hotel, when he was pushed to it, remembered that the boss had paid his bill up to date that night, before going up to his rooms.

Past that, the trace was completely lost. The conductor on the Fast Mail, enabound, on the night in question swore by all that was good and great that Mr. Norcross hadn't been a passenger on his train. And he would certainly have known it if he had been carrying his general manager.

Over in the other field there was absolutely nothing to incriminate the Hatch people. So far from it, Hatch had turned up at the railroad office, bright and early the morning after Mr. Norcross had gone. He had asked for the boss, and failing to find him, he had hunted up Mr. Van Britt. What he wanted, it seemed, was a chance to reopen the proposition that had been made to him the day before—the offer of the new Citizens Storage & Warehouse company to purchase the various Red Tower equipments and plants.

Mr. Van Britt had referred him to Mr. Ripley, and to our lawyer Hatch had made what purported to be an open confession, admitting that he had gone to Mr. Norcross the night before, determined to fight the new company to a finish, and that there had been a good many things said that would better be forgotten. Now, however, he was willing to talk straight business and a compromise. He had called his board of directors together, and they had voted to sell their track-bordering plants to Citizens Storage & Warehouse if a price could be amicably agreed upon.

With Mr. Norcross gone and a new general manager coming, Mr. Ripley was afraid to make a move, and Hatch was pressing him to get busy on the bargain and sale proposition; was apparently as anxious now to sell and withdraw as he had at first been to fight everything in sight.

By the morning I came on the scene the man Grimmer had, as they say, just about done his do. He was only a sort of Journeyman detective, and had run out of clues. When he came in and talked to Mr. Van Britt and Mr. Ripley, I could see that he fully believed in the drop-out theory, and even the lawyer and Mr. Van Britt had to admit that the facts were with him. The boss had written a letter saying definitely that he was quitting; he had paid his hotel bill, and his grips were gone; and two days later President Duntun had appointed a new general manager, which was proof positive, you'd say, that the boss had resigned and had so notified the New York office.

When the noon hour came along, Fred May took me out to Junction, and we went to the Bullard Cafe. "It was pretty rich for our blood at two dollars per, but I guess Fred thought his job was gone, anyway, and felt reckless. Over the good things at our corner table we did a little thrashing on our own account—and got a lot more chaff and no grain."

Fred didn't want to agree with Grimmer and the facts, but there didn't seem to be any help for it. And as for me, I had other things in mind all the time—the big scary fear that somebody had got to the boss after he had left Ripley on the night of the shockings, and had just bashed him in the face with the story of Mrs. Sheila's sham widowhood.

By and by we got around to my burned hand, and Fred told me Grimmer had at least succeeded in clearing up whatever mystery there was about that. The wall switch for the electric light in the lower hall at the headquarters was right beside the outer door jamb—as I knew. It had burned out in some way, and that was why there was no light on when I went downstairs. And in burning out it had short-circuited itself with the brass lock of the door; Fred didn't know just how, but Grimmer had explained it. I asked him if Grimmer had explained how a 110 volt light current could cook me like a fried potato, and he said he hadn't.

The afternoon at the office was a sort of cut-and-come-again repent of the morning, with lots of people milling around and things going crooked and cross-ways, as they were bound to with the boss gone and a new boss coming. Nobody had any heart for anything, and along late in the afternoon when word came of a freight wreck at Cross Creek Gulch, Mr. Van Britt threw up both hands and yipped and swore like a pirate. It just showed what a raw edge the headquarters' nerves were taking on.

Though it wasn't his business, Mr. Van Britt went out with the wrecking train, and Fred May and I had it all to ourselves for the remaining hour or so up to closing time. Just before five, Mr. Cantrell, the editor of the Mountaineer, dropped in. He looked a bit disappointed when he found only us two. Fred turned him over to me, and he came on in to the private office when I asked him to, and smoked one of the boss' good cigars out of a box that I found in the big desk.

I liked Cantrell. He was just the sort of man you expect an editor to be; tall and thin and kind of mild-eyed, with an absent way with him that made you feel as if he were thinking along about a mile ahead of you when you were striking the best thing-guilt you ever knew of.

"No word yet from Mr. Norcross, I suppose," he said. "I told him there wasn't. 'It's very singular to me, and to all of us, as it is to you,' I threw in. The editor smoked on for a full minute without saying anything more, and he seemed to be staring absently at a steamship picture on the wall. When he got good and ready, he began again.

"You don't need any common plain-clothes man on this job, Jimmie; you need the best there is: a real, dyed-in-the-wool Sherlock Holmes, if there ever were such a miracle."

"You think it is a case for a detective?" "I do," he replied, looking straight at me with his mild blue eyes. "It is one of Mr. Norcross' close friends I should get the best help that could be found and not lose a single minute about it."

Since there was nobody around who was any closer to the boss than I was, I jumped into the hole pretty quick.

"Can you tell me anything that will help, Mr. Cantrell?" I asked.

"Not specifically; I wish I could. But I can say this: I know Mr. Rufus Hatch and his associates up one side and down the other. They are hand-in-glove with the political pirates who control this state. From the little that has been published in the Hatch-controlled newspapers all over the state during the past few weeks, it is apparent that Mr. Norcross' removal was a thing greatly to be desired, not only by the Red Tower people, but also by the political bosses. That ought to be enough to make all of you suspicious—very suspicious, Jimmie."

The tall editor got up and made ready to go. "If I were in your place, or rather in Mr. Van Britt's, I'd get an expert on this job—and I shouldn't let such grass grow under my feet while I was about it. Call me up at the Mountaineer office if I can help." And with that he went away.

It was just a little while after this that I put on my hat and strolled across the yard tracks to Kirgan's office in the shops. Kirgan was an old friend, as you might say: he had been on the Oregon building job with us and knew the boss through and through. I didn't have anything special to say, but I kind of wanted to talk to somebody who knew. So I loafed in on Kirgan.

He loved the boss like a brother. As soon as I came in, he fired his kid stenographer on some errand or other, and made me sit down and tell him all I knew. When I got through he was pulling at his long mustache and wrinkling his nose as I've seen a bulldog do when he was getting ready to bite something.

"You haven't got all the drop-out business cornered over yonder in the general office, Jimmie," he said slowly, tilting back in his swivel chair and glowering at me with those sultry eyes of his. "On that same night that you're talkin' about, I stand to lose one party, and Atlantic-type locomotive,

At Ten o'clock she was set in on the spur below the coal chutes. At twelve o'clock, when the round-house watchman went down there to see if her fire was banked all right, she was gone."

CHAPTER VII

The Lost 1016

When Kirgan told me he was shy a whole locomotive, I began to see all sorts of fire-works. Of course, there was nothing on earth to connect the boss' disappearance with that of the engine which had been left standing below the coal chutes, but the two things snapped themselves together for me like the halves of an automatic coupling, and I couldn't wedge them apart.

"An engine—even a little old Atlantic-type—is a pretty big thing to lose, isn't it, Kirgan?" I asked.

Kirgan righted his chair with a crash.

"Jimmie, I've sifted this blamed outfit through an eighty-mesh screen!" he growled. "With all the devil-to-pay that's goin' on over at the headquarters, I didn't want to bother Mr. Van Britt, and I haven't been advertisin' in the newspapers. But it's a holy fact, Jimmie. The 'Sixteen's gone!"

"I've Sifted This Blame Outfit Through an Eighty-Mesh Screen."

I was trying to pry myself loose from the notion that the loss of the engine and the boss' disappearance at about the same time were in some way connected with each other. It was no use; the idea refused to let go. "Look here, Kirgan," I shoved in, "can you think of any possible reason why Mr. Norcross should write Mr. Van Britt a letter saying that he had quit and was going east on the midnight train and then should change his mind and come down here and go somewhere on that engine?"

After I had said it, it sounded so foolish that I wanted to take it back. But Kirgan didn't seem to look at it that way.

"Well, I'll be shot!" he exclaimed. "I never once thought of that! But where the devil would he go? And how would he get there without somebody finding out? And why in Sam Hill would he do a thing like that, anyway? Why, sufferin' Moses! if he wanted to go anywhere, all he had to do was to order out his car and tell the dispatcher, and go."

"I can't figure it out any better than you can," I confessed. "Mr. Norcross is gone, and the Ten-Sixteen is gone, and they both dropped out between ten and twelve o'clock on the same night. Mart, I don't believe Mr. Norcross went east at all! I believe, when we find that engine, we'll find him!"

Kirgan got out of his chair and began to walk up and down in the little space between his desk and the drawing-board. Besides being the best boss mechanic in the West, he was a first-class fighting man, with a clear head and nerve to burn. When he had got as far as he could go alone he turned on me.

"Jimmie, do you reckon this Red Tower outfit was far enough along in its scrap with the boss to put a job to pass him out of the game?" he demanded.

I told him it didn't seem to fit into any twentieth-century scheme of things, and past that I mentioned the fact that the Hatch people had taken the back track and were now offering to sell out and stop checking the wheels of reform.

"I know," he put in. "But I've been readin' the papers, Jimmie, and it ain't all Red Tower, not by a jugful. The big graft in this neck-a-woods is political, and the Red Tower gang is only set-a-cogs in the bull-wheel. Mr. Norcross was gettin' himself mighty pointedly dalked; you know that. The way he was aimin' to run things, it was beginnin' to look as if maybe the people of this state might wake up some day and turn in and help him."

"I know all about that," I threw in. "But where are you trying to land, Mart?"

XX SURE CURES

"OLD JINGLESON says he can cure any disease by drinking hot water," announced the bald boarder. "He has had every disease that is officially recognized by the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons and has banished them all by that simple means."

"Anything becomes a curative agent if a man believes in it hard enough," said the star boarder.

"Jasper Jones says he was tormented with rheumatism for ten years, and tried everything of which we read in the almanacs, and nothing did him any good until he got a horse chestnut and carried it around in his pocket. Then the rheumatism disappeared—and hasn't played a return engagement since. I have talked with Jasper often, trying to point out the folly of his claim, but he refuses to yield an inch. 'I used to have all kinds of rheumatism before I got that horse chestnut,' he says, 'and now I haven't a single one. Who would ask better proof than that?'"

"And echo answers who, my dear Mrs. Jiggers. It may be that a horse chestnut in the hip pocket is a specific for rheumatism. It isn't safe to denounce any theory as a false alarm."

"Mr. Grifwyn used to be always grinning about his diseases, until it became unpleasant to meet him. He couldn't talk about anything else. He ignored the crops and regarded the weather with contempt, and devoted all his great energy and talents to a discussion of the things that were hurting him. Then all of a sudden he began boasting of how hale and hearty he was. He explained that the road to health was absurdly easy, and there was no excuse for sickness anywhere. All a man had to do, he said, was to get up early in the morning, before sunrise, and draw in a hundred long breaths of the crisp morning air."

"He made the discovery himself, and it was more important than any modern invention. His sincerity is shown by the fact that there was no possible graft connected with it. A man can't sell the morning atmosphere at so much per breath. It's a great discovery was free to everybody. If I were going to invent a cure for anything I'd compound something that could be put up in bottles and sold at a dollar a throw. The man who invents a fresh air cure is running benevolence into the ground."

"His cure was so cheap that I decided to try it, as I was suffering from a broken heart and a sluggish liver at that period. I set my alarm clock for an hour before sunrise, and got up in the pale, bleak dawn, and put my head out of the window to inhale the prescribed hundred breaths. I had reached the twenty-seventh breath when a disappointed bee or vesp, on its way home from a night of revelry, stung me on the nose, and I was in such haste to put a porous plaster on that organ that I didn't finish the treatment, and never tried it again."

"But I knew many people who claimed they were cured of everything from the mumps, hoof and mouth disease, by the hundred-breaths treatment."

"There was a spring on my father's farm, and I doped it with sulphuric acid and a few other wholesome ingredients, and then began selling the water to the afflicted for ten cents a jug. Some marvelous cures were effected. Men hobbled there on crutches to buy the healing fluid, and when they left they threw their crutches away."

"For a brief session I had more small change than any boy in the county, but my father returned home from a visit, and when he found out what I had been doing, he inter-viewed me with a hickory pole, and for a year or two I was busy paying back the money I had collected from sufferers. The people who had been benefited suffered a relapse as soon as they heard the water was faked; which goes to show, Mrs. Jiggers, that we are entitled to a better quality of butter on this table."

Way of Escape.
Flatbush—"That's a funny thing about a bowlegged man."

Bensonhurst—"What's that?"

"Why, when he meets a mad dog in a narrow alley he's more bowlegged than ever."

Just Like the Old Home.
Mr. Scramplegh—Can you give my daughter a home such as she has been accustomed to?

The Sultor—Well, I've got a bull terrier and a fighting cat and a parrot and if that won't do it I know where I can get a chimpanzee.

The Dear Girls.
Dora—Did you see the way that man smiled at me?

Doris—Yes, dear. Let me have a look at your face. Perhaps you've got a smut on your nose!

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

TO CRUISE IN BUZZARD'S BAY

The 1921 National Council Sencamp of the Sea Scouts, Boy Scouts of America, will be pitched on the grounds of the Tabor academy, Marion, Mass. Any sea scout, scout or cabin boy, weighing at least 112 pounds and at least 15 years of age is eligible to participate. The program will, like all scouting, be "fun and work mixed." The law of the camp is the scout law; trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, clean, brave and reverent.

The training for the first ten days (July 6-15) will consist of the regular seaship routine with elementary seamanship, life-saving and short cruises under oars. This will be followed by a long cruise down the bay for all hands in the Curlew's flotilla of boats, camping each noon on one of the many fascinating beaches and islands at hand. This will be the third annual cruise of the Curlew. The same program will be repeated July 28 to August 4; August 7 to 13. The 97-foot American schooner, Black Duck, under Ensign Cheatham of the Tabor academy staff, will also cruise in Buzzard's bay manned by her regular crew and such sea scouts as are "schooner men." General Goethals, chairman of the national seascout committee, and other members of the committee will visit the camp from time to time.

GETS MEDAL FOR BRAVE ACT.

The Court of Honor of the National council recently awarded a bronze medal to Harry C. Harper, a charter member of Salt Lake Troop No. 51, for his courage and prompt action in saving the life of a five-year-old child who was in danger of being dashed to death over an embankment in an automobile. The child was alone in his father's car and accidentally released the brakes, setting the machine moving backward toward the embankment. The child's screams attracted the attention of young Harper, who ran out from his own yard, jumped on the running board of the car and succeeded in stopping it, just as it balanced itself on two wheels on the edge. A moment's delay and both the child and the scout would probably have been crushed under the car. Harper is an Eagle scout and distinguished himself during the war, for his achievements in selling Liberty bonds and War Savings stamps. He was awarded medals for both these services and possesses the ace medal with five silver bars and the Liberty loan medal with bars of honor for each campaign.

SCOUTS TO HELP AIR SERVICE.

Washington scouts had the honor of laying the first marker "D. C. 1," for the new air route from Bolling Field to Dayton, Ohio, and plans are being made at the request of the federal air service for definite co-operation of boy scouts with the service. Some of the work which it is contemplated having scouts do will consist of helping aviators making forced landings, reporting adverse weather conditions, marking airways, guarding places landed or broken, night signaling, dispatch work, reporting on terrain, etc.

A SCOUT IS TRUSTWORTHY.

Beaumont, Texas, scouts were asked to undertake the delivery of telephone books. "We used to go out into the streets and get the first kids we saw who weren't busy, to do the job," says the manager of the local telephone company. "As a result we frequently found a number of books that had been thrown away, and their loss was costly. So now we have the scouts deliver the books because we can trust them." Worth while praise that and worth deserving.

Notes of Interest from Washington

TARIFF NECESSITIES

Paragraphs have had lots of fun in their day in making jokes about the insistent demands of Democrats in Southern States for protective tariff duties upon cotton and other sectional products. The shoe seems to be on the other foot just now owing to the fact that Minnesota Congressmen have protested to President Harding against the reported refusal of the Ways and Means Committee to put lumber on the free list in the permanent tariff bill. The tariff resembles prohibition with a good many people who believe it is a fine thing for the other fellow. Republican statesmen of Minnesota who at one time were insistent on shutting out Canadian lumber now want the raw product let in so that they may manufacture it in their mills. In the days when the McKinley bill was passed it was the father and the mother of all the tribes of little industry. The steel industry was built up under the policies of protection incorporated in that measure. But today the modern steel grandchild claims that it is able to stand alone, and it wants no tariff because American steel kings dominate the markets of the world. So it appears that the products which need a tariff to-day scorn it tomorrow. That is the order of change, and why should it not logically be accepted by governments and tariff makers, since nature itself proceeds along the same line? Marcus Aurelius, who has been quoted since the second century, was wise with regard to Mother Nature, and he observed that "nature loves to change existing forms and to make new ones like them."

The tariff also "loves to change existing forms," and the South and Minnesota of the North can find plenty of justification in their methods.

ARMY AND NAVY JUNK

The new Shipping Board finds that they have been given a liability rather than an asset to manage for the Government. There are 684 steel ships of 4,469,000 tons laid up, to say nothing of 275 idle wooden ships practically on the scrap heap. Charles M. Schwab, formerly Director General of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, has expressed the opinion that it would be good business to charge off two-thirds of the cost of the emergency fleet, which was $3,000,000,000, and sell the ships to private owners. It is estimated that the new Shipping Board will make sales of their surplus ships at about one-third of the original cost. A good many sales have heretofore been made at a much smaller figure. The Shipping Board seems to have been assigned the job of running a tremendous junk shop for the United States Navy. Gradually people are awakening to the fact that it is as impracticable to carry on a great shipping business with the boats that have lived through the war period as it would be to maintain bus and jitney lines by the use of the automobiles and trucks which the army used in this country and in Europe.

Secretary of War John W. Weeks, in speaking of his job, said that he was "disposing of army material bought extravagantly and recklessly, which is being sold far below cost."

WAR TIME GRAFT

Another branch of the national administration has thrown its hat into the ring with reference to the purchases made by the Army and Navy. The Department of Justice has issued a statement to the effect that it has been making investigations of "war time graft." The Attorney General says that he does not desire to cast any reflection "on any honest man, but it is equally desired that any dishonest person shall be brought to justice." Denying any intention "to undertake any muck raking proposition," the Attorney General said that "in the war period, when everybody was expected to stand by the Government, how can we justify sending a lot of boys and men to prison for antagonizing the Government in organizing an Army and then let the men go free who have been guilty of dishonest practices? We are not going to look for the little fellows," continues the statement. "We will throw back the mirrors caught in the net. Actual investigations are now under way. A great many of the big war contracts have been called to our attention. The reports of the special investigation committee of Congress have been brought to our attention and will be helpful."

The closing paragraph in the foregoing is significant because the investigation in which the Government has been worsted in lawsuits computed in millions. The Muscle Shoals project in Alabama is prominently figured in the report. On the other hand private interests connected with that project have set forth a very vigorous defense. As a matter of fact all concerned are prepared with affidavits, and the Attorney General commends up on the difficulties which are before him due to the fact that all of these contractors have engaged the best attorneys in the country to defend them.

TERMINAL AND COUNTRY ELEVATORS

The Federal Trade Commission has made an exhaustive report to Congress regarding country and terminal grain elevators. This report deals very largely with the profits growing out of this feature of grain marketing and shows that the great terminal elevators located in Kansas City, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago produced a return on their total investments, including borrowed funds in 1919-20, of 28.41 per cent. This in contrast to 8.78 per cent in 1913-14. After this presentation of facts, establishing beyond any doubt that the enterprises paid large profits, the Commission turns to the conditions of the country elevators and its investigation shows that in 1915-16 there were 907 elevators that gave a return on their investments of 15.87 per cent. In the year 1919-20 there were 1091 elevators which returned 18.80 per cent. This is about ten per cent less than that accomplished by the larger groups in the big cities; but the results indicate that these country elevators located in the States of North Dakota, Minnesota, South Dakota and Montana made what could not be called a mean profit. It may be that the larger institutions handling grain were able to do their business more advantageously than the country elevators, and that in the long run there was little difference in the ultimate profit that the farmers had to allow no matter whether they carried on their transactions with the terminal elevators or the country elevators, or with both. The Commission says that the highest rates of return on investment, excluding borrowed funds, were made by cooperative paying patronage dividends, and that in 1915-16 this dividend was 42.21 per cent, and 39.08 per cent in 1919-20. Elevator profits seem to be quite like those of all lines of business, inasmuch as they bob up and down during different years. The gross profit per bushel for country elevators was 8.05 cents in 1920 while in the terminal elevators it was 7.35 cents per bushel. In so-called non-line country elevators gross profits per bushel in 1919-20 ranged from 3.55 cents per bushel for forty-nine Iowa elevators to 15.59 cents for thirteen Montana elevators; the average of 526 elevators in this class being 6.98 cents.

The Federal Trade Commission in its report to Congress contents itself with submitting its findings without any specific recommendations except to comment that "in view of the present bills before Congress with reference to regulation of the grain trade, and of the present wide public interest in the problem of grain marketing," the Commission believes that the data it has collected will be helpful at this time.

PROVING THE WEATHER

According to the United States Weather Bureau, the weather is just the same as "when we were boys and girls." An authoritative statement from this wonderful branch of the United States Government says that "since the time of the revolutionary war, there has been no permanent change in temperature." To prove it, the mean temperature for ten year periods beginning in 1790 and running down to 1920, taken at New Haven, Connecticut, shows that there is a variation on the average of less than one degree of mean temperature in all that time. According to the weather man New Haven is a first-class criterion that may be accepted as standard of existing weather conditions throughout the country. An analysis of actual facts establishes the interesting point that hot Summers and cold Winters, and inconsiderate Springs and Falls, strike a perfect average when checked up for a period of ten years.
